MANY ABSENT ONES.

Schoolhouse Sermon in a Johnstown Suburb, by the Bishop.

LISTENERS WITH SEEKING FACES.

Two Pathetic Pictures Out of Many That Might be Drawn.

BISHOP WHITEHEAD'S WORDS OF CHEER

FROM A STAPP CORRESPONDENT, 1 JOHNSTOWN, June 16-The classroom of the Peciarville schoolhouse was turned into a temporary church this morning, and when the Right Reverend Bishop Whitehead, of Pittsburg, walked into the little room, the place was packed from wall to wall. It was a singular congregation in many re-first to arrive. One after another of the people came in; the looks in their eyes were all of about the same kind-not a vacant stare: no, all of them appeared to bave a kind of searching

The strong, robust, athletically-built man who gave you the idea of a loving and protecting father and husband, came in with his head bowed and his gaze upon the floor. Before he sat down he looked around at the number of women who were already seated. He seemed to be scrutinizing every feature, every contour of the countenances before him. Then another more searching glance from his anxious eyes swept over the assembly, and only then he sat down. He bowed his head and buried his face in his hands. His actions, his looks suggested his thoughts; they were not hard to read; it was one of the thousands of wifeless and childless men from Johnstown, who had lost his home, his all, in the great calamity of two weeks ago.

STILL SEEKING THEM.

While convinced that the chubby little hands of his baby boy had been torn from his loving embrace by the waters, while he knew that the sweet, smiling face of his wife had already been buried in yonder cemetery on the hill, still that thought of innate hope which is no more than a stepchild of despair, was yet within him, and even in this temporary house of God, among the tamiliar faces of his friends, where he had so often found his dearones, the thought became once more strong within him, the flickering light of hope blazed once more into a flame, but only to be quenched again more effectually, when he did not find those his heart venrned for.

Then another life-and-death picture was framed. A woman about 30 years of age, with a beautiful golden-haired boy by her side (mother and son), came in. The woman had evidently lost everything except her child. She was dressed in a thin calico skirt and a black bodice, and her outfit looked much the worse for wear. An old bonnet, with a lew crushed flowers, covered her head. The child's clothing was in a similar condition; but, while the mother's face showed the traces of sorrow plainly in every line, the little boy looked with a spirit of wonder and astonishment at the crowd within the schoolhouse church.

"Say, mamma," he spoke out, in his childish voice, "I wonder if papa and little Alice are here? There are so many people, and I think they must be. Let me look?"

And with these words the small fellow tore nimself away, looked all around, scanned the face of every man and peered into the eyes of all the little ones in the room. After a while he turned back to his mother, however, and the teeling of that little child, the disappointment which must have filled his heart, was reflected upon his leatures, though it cannot be described THE SADDEST SOMEWHERE.

Hymns were sung, and after that the bishop ascended the little pulpit.

"My dear friends, brethren and sisters," he commenced, "I think I have now the hardest task before me that ever presented itself to me in all my experience as a minister of the gospel. But of one thing you may be certain—I have not come here to preach to you; for you this is not the time to listen to a sermon. Still, I would like to tell you a good many things. I feel a good many things which I should like to express in this hour of your sorrow and affliction, and if I leave anything unsaid, do not think I left it out intentionally. I feel it all, but I dare not trust myself to say it all." Continuing, Bishop Whitehead said: it all." Continuing, Bishop Whitehead

There was he, the Rev. A. P. Diller, who formerly stood at the head of this parish, who was a man I loved well, and with whom I came into closer contact than with most of the pastors in my discoses.

into closer contact than with most of the pastors in my diocese.

Now, as I take a retrospective view of the great calamity which has overcome you, and its disastrous and harrowing results, there is one thing which has struck me as very forcible, and this is the fact that, in spite of the greatest afflictions, the most terrible misfortunes, one thing remains unshaken, and that is our mother church. She still remains, with all its mercy, all its promise, all its peace, all its giory and all its magnificence. We can gather around her knees the same as ever, and if I come here to bring you a few words of comfort I cannot think of saving anything more comforting than that, in spite of all changes and transformation, there it remains, the one thing stable and unchangeable.

The first line of the epistle on the Feast of Trinity, which we celebrate to-day, says that there are many doors of heaven. Now, it is possible to look to heaven through many doors. Some people always see storms and tempests ahead of them.

SPEAKING PEACE TO THEM.

Do not look to them; the Lord is not so much in the storm and in the tempest as He is in the ealm and the serene. I know some of you, while thinking of the late visitation of a dreadful bereavement, believe it came to curse you, and so respond by even swearing at God. Do not think that He has sent such a thing in wrath. Whatever He does, He does it for some purpose. But the Lord is in the calm, and, whatever He works, He has done it for your good. If you cannot see it now, there will nevertheless come a time when you will see it, through the Lord Jesus Christ, who has been sent us by the Lord God.

Do not lose faith, above all things, neither in God nor in the church. The loved ones who have been torn away from you are not beyond your reach. Ask God to bless you. They are in the portal of glories awaiting them. They are there just as they were here. They are there in peaceful congregation, and I believe that your beloved pastor is among them, ministering and talking to them just as he used to do to you, and they are awaiting you all, to be together again for evermore on the grand day of resurrection. ful bereavement, believe it came to curse you

The reverend gentleman's address affected his audience to tears—tears which eased pain, for no one had, perhaps, talked to them so hopefully and cheeringly since the them so hopefully and cheeringly since the flood. A sigh of re-assurance came from many a sorrowing heart; and, when the Bishop invited them to step forward and partake of the sacrament, the walk of the men seemed to be firm and that of the women more elastic and buoyant.

In the afternoon the Bishop made arrangements to hire Henry George's hall, on Main street, wherein services will be held hereafter every Sunday. Rev. Mr. Bragdon will take charge of the congregation.

Six Thousand Dollars' Worth of Supplies Already Sent From East Liverpool. FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT, 1

JOHNSTOWN, June 16 .- Captain Charles M. Fairman, of Pittsburg, a prominent member of the G. A. R., and W. H. Sweils. Commander of Post 44, at East Liverpool, O., arrived in town with a carload of provicions, sent by the G. A. R. men and the citizens of the Pottery City, for the benefit of the survivors, While here the sen-

THE NURSES' NOBLE WORK.

Piroless Efforts of the Hospital Attendants to Relieve Suffering.

FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.] JOHNSTOWN, June 16 .- Up to the present time the Bedford Street Hospital has treated 52 flood sufferers, of whom two died. To-day there are seven patients, two men and five women, in the clean, well-kept hall. Many minor surgical cases have been treated daily, and the outside cases come in so fast that no record can be kept of them. Dr. McCaskey, of Bolivar, and Dr. J. C. Sheridan, of Johnstown, have charge of the patients, besides A. L. Booth, a skilled male nurse from Detroit. As an instance of the tireless energy with which the attendants have worked day and night to relieve the sufferers, A. H. Bab-cock, Secretary of the hospital, did not take spects. Your correspondent was one of the off his clothing for nine days when he first arrived on the scene, because sleep was out of the question. It is impossible for those who have not seen them at their work to realize the immense amount of labor per-formed by the hospital physicians, nurses and attendants, and it is remarkable how few have succumbed to the terrors of the BAHMEB.

DEAD ANIMALS IN THE RIVER.

A Large Number Discovered by a State Health Officer.

PEPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. JOHNSTOWN, June 19 -- There is a slight falling off in the number of prescriptions issued at the hospitals. The State Board of Health reports little change in the sanitary condition. Dr. Groff says that all that is necessary now is a continuance of the strict sanitary provisions. Bronchitis and diarrhon are common among the laborers, and there are two cases of pneumonia at the Bedford Street Hospital. Measles are prevalent smong children.

Dr. Free, of the State Board of Health, br. Free, of the State Board of Health, has inspected the river towns as far down as Sang Hollow. The worst discovery made was the large number of dead horses and cows in the river. The dynamite explosions have brought the carcasses to the surface. They are in a bad state of decom-

WON THE HEARTS OF ALL, Colonel Elliott Makes Himself Solid With the Army of Workers.

[FROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.] JOHNSTOWN, June 16 .- Colonel W. J. Elliott, Acting Assistant Adjutant General, of Philadelphia, who is on the ground lending his aid to General Hastings in the administration of affairs, has won the hearts of the corps of newspaper correspond-ents, stenographers and telegraph operators by his many courtesies. He is a graduate of West Point and a soldier from the ground up.

One night this week, about one o'clock, Colonel Elliott arose from his cot, and, at-tired in his nightclothes, skirmished around and found sleeping quarters for the ste-nographers who were just going of duty.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Very proper inquiry it is. Why, this! in making an outlet to sell in about five weeks, enough of our clothing to ordinarily do us a season, we have taken the short road of cutting off profits.

So, then! for every dollar you spend till these goods are gone you get as much as if you spent the best part of two. And, it's clothing that deserves our unequivocal indorsement.
